APPROVE HOUSE SHOALS ACT

Part Of Hospital To Be Memorial To Stockton

MEMORY OF HERO
WILL BE HONORED
IN CAMPAIGN HERE

Funds To Be Set Aside
From The Original
Contributions

APPROVAL GIVEN TO DAILY'S PLANMemorial Idea Proving Popular Part Of The Campaign

Benevolent hospital's campaign executive committee has taken up the Daily's suggestion of erecting a memorial in the new hospital wing to Frank R. Stockton, one of Perishing's Hundred Heroes of the war and a native son of the Tennessee Valley.

From the first funds subscribed by the general public a sum will be set aside to erect a section of the new hospital wing in dedication to Frank R. Stockton and the heroic act which won for him the nation's adoration as well as the highest plaudits of his commanding general.

The hospital committee will co-operate with the local post of the American Legion with regard to a suitable inscription on the memorial tablet. The section of the wing to be thus dedicated cannot be announced until a complete list is available of those parts of the hospital the erection of which has already been provided for by pledges already in the hands of W. R. Spight, the campaign treasurer.

Mrs. E. C. Payne, as president of the Ladies' Benevolent Society, has strongly approved this decision and expressed her pleasure that Benevolent Hospital could thus in a new way serve Morgan county and the Twin Cities.

Thus the coming campaign takes on a twofold purpose, not only to erect an adequate hospital for the use of four counties, but likewise to establish a permanent memorial which will give just that type of service to others as young Stockton died in giving to a comrade in arms.

Morgan county's hero would not have desired recognition other than this. His name will thus be constantly associated with the saving of life and the relief of physical woe.

Making Race

W. H. Day, prominent local business man, today announced his withdrawal as a candidate for tax collector of Morgan County, assigning his inability to arrange his business affairs in a satisfactory manner, as his reason for his decision.

Mr. Day, who was considered a very strong candidate in the race expresses, in a card to the public, his appreciation for the offers of support which had been made to him. His card follows:

Facing the fact that it will be impossible for me to arrange my business affairs in a satisfactory manner, I find that it will be impossible for me to make the race for Tax Collector at this time.

I desire to express my heartfelt appreciation to my many friends throughout the county who have pledged their unqualified support to me and have given me every encouragement that my race would be successful.

Words are inadequate to express my appreciation to my friends and I hope that by withdrawing from the race at this date, my action will not embarrass any one.

Yours faithfully,
W. H. DAY

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 3.—A 25 per cent increase in food, feed and forage crops and a similar decrease in cotton acreage was urged today by J. R. Wannamaker, president of the American Cotton Association, as a program essential to the welfare of the Southern farmer and outlined in a plan of campaign proposed to bring about a reduced cotton acreage during the coming crop year.

More than 1,000 delegates were in attendance. Mr. Wannamaker, delivering the keynote address at the opening session today of the south-wide cotton acreage reduction convention here, told delegates to the convention that cotton acreage must be cut at least 25 per cent if the Southern farmer is to prosper.

Give Out Plans

Under the plan outlined by Mr. Wannamaker, campaigns to insure an increased food and feed crop and decrease in cotton acreage will be placed in the hands of the state commissioners of agriculture, extension service officials, and a committee and representatives of the American Cotton Association of the various states. "All who realize the paramount importance of this campaign to the cotton farmer and economic life of the entire south will co-operate and push the work to a successful conclusion," Mr. Wannamaker said, in urging that cotton today is selling below the cost of production.

"We should immediately take steps to organize the cotton producing industry of the entire south, so as to establish profits along these lines. It is only in this way that permanent prosperity can be brought to the south and the entire nation benefited. If this is not done, the cotton producer is doomed to sink to a lower standard of living."

Records of 30 years give "proof" he declared, "that every effort on the part of the Southern cotton farmer to increase food, feed and forage outputs and other money crops, besides cotton, has resulted in higher cotton prices."

"We have been without a national agricultural policy and agriculture has been without adequate representation at the national capital practically since the war between the states," Mr. Wannamaker said in urging that the Southern farmer should bestir himself to work out his own problems.

He declared that relief through national legislation could come only through correlation of the south and the west.

Seeks Control

Control of food, feed, forage and cotton acreage under the supervision of joint commissions or boards—to be made possible by uniform legislation in the various cotton states, was offered by Mr. Wannamaker as a means to bring relief to the agricultural interests in the south and urged as a further move for the betterment of the farmer that the governor of each state within the cotton belt name a special cotton commission of six men to study the problem and jointly prepare uniform legislation.

Such legislation he said, "should create the necessary machinery for retiring such proportions of the cotton crop as are in excess of demand."

Peace Pact

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—A move to force house action on a bill designed to relieve the anthracite situation was begun today in the house by Representative Boylan, democrat, New York. Almost at the same time, the resolution requesting President Coolidge to invite the committee of anthracite operators and miners, which broke off meetings yesterday, to meet at the white house, was introduced by Senator Copeland, democrat, of New York.

Neither move, however, bore any immediate fruit. A majority of the house would be necessary to bring the Boylan bill out of committee where it has reposed since introduction. The Copeland resolution also was laid aside in the senate when Senator Jones, republican, Washington refused unanimous consent for its consideration.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 3.—A resolution, calling on President Coolidge to take such action "in the interest of the health and prosperity of the people of the United States" as may seem proper to conciliate the differences between anthracite miners and operators was instituted in state legislature today.

It was laid over until next Monday without discussion.

Heavy snow is probable in portions of New England, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The weather will be generally fair on Thursday east of the Mississippi river.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The senate agricultural committee today approved, 11 to five, the house resolution to create a joint congressional committee to negotiate bids for disposal of Muscle Shoals.

The vote came a few hours after seven members of the committee had been called to the white house for a conference with President Coolidge.

Those who discussed the question with the president were: Senators McNary, Oregon; Capper, Kansas; Harrell, Oklahoma; Dineen, Illinois; Sackett, Kentucky; republicans and Smith, South Carolina, and Ramsdell Louisiana, democrats.

When the vote was taken on the resolution, however, Senator Smith and Senator Ramsdell voted against it as did Senators Norbeck, republican, South Dakota, Gooding, republican, Idaho and Norris, republican, Nebraska, who is chairman of the committee.

More than an hour was consumed before the vote in discussion over the adoption of the Smith measure, which would provide for the distribution of power for Muscle Shoals and experimentation on a large scale of the processes for the production of nitrate.

Numerous other amendments were offered to the resolution but were voted down. Senator Smith now plans to offer his bill as a substitute for the house resolution when it is called up on the floor of the senate.

Shortly after the senate met, Senator Heflin submitted the committee report to the senate where it will be placed on the calendar.

Yvonne, with characteristic impulse, gave him both her hands, gesture which brought a flush into his face. Her voice and smile were warm. "This would be John," she said. "You see I have only heard Joanna call you that. She has been very eager for your coming. She is just about to make her first appearance."

John plainly was ill at ease. He had expected Joanna to be waiting for him, and for him alone. He was not prepared for this sort of introduction into her new surroundings. Brandon chatted with him easily, and brought up Kenilworth and Dorminster. "They have both begun to be amusing to Miss Manners," Brandon explained. "So far, we are her main circle of dependents."

The music that came down from the balcony suddenly died away, leaving a confusion of voices that ended a dance. Already women who shouldn't drink champagne, and men who insisted that they do, were giving hints of the effects of it. But, as unexpectedly as the music had subsided, there was a general commotion, and then a hush. The four men, John among them, stepped through the palm fringed doorway and into the larger room. Yvonne, completely beautiful, a striking figure, the shimmer of her black and white dress, the sparkle of the diamonds at her throat, stood a few steps up on the stairway. Her voice, silver tinkling in the room, floated over the assemblage—the assemblage of those who were good and not so good.

"My friends," she called to them, "I am in a daring mood tonight. Just how, and why, some of you will determine quickly. I am about to present to you something that is very fragile, and new, and fresh, and something eager to be shaped into the best fashions of the day. It is just a girl whom I have taken very close to my heart, and who thinks she should be like me. Some of you will disagree with her, and, perhaps, plan to make her different. Others will have ideas of their own. I commend her, to all of you—and am curious to know whether it shall be you, or her, who profits most."

She raised her jeweled hand, while the murmur of wondering voices grew, and gave a signal.

CHAPTER XVII

John To make of Joanna's appearance a dramatic entrance, openly stage managed, evidently was an impromptu impulse of Yvonne's. Joanna had expected nothing of the kind. She waited, unsuspecting, in her white and gold boudoir. Yvonne had said: "Give them time to decide who's to be nice to who. Then the few in whom you will be most interested will take you in hand."

When a maid, hurriedly posted to catch Yvonne's signal, informed Joanna that she was expected, she hurried down the stairs from the upper floor and onto the balcony, from which the grand staircase descended. She was still framed in the doorway when she realized that the people in the great room below were waiting for her, Joanna's face uplifted.

She caught her breath. A hand flew nervously to her throat. She would have drawn back, but instantly realized that she was too late. Yvonne caught her glance and with a nod reassured her. Then exhilaration leaped through her stirred pulses. The carnival spirit of the scene below reached up and encompassed her. A new ecstasy of happiness quivered at her finger tips, in her toes and throughout the vibrant warmth of her. This was to be her setting, symbol of the scintillating festival of which her life was to be forever shaped. These people, people of her new world, were waiting down there to welcome her among them and their kind! Bravado came into her eyes, and arrogance dimpled her cheeks. She moved over to first step between the carved and carving stair posts and stood for a moment perfectly still. Then she blew a kiss down into the room.

A lorette coming out of her shell, Brandon murmured. "Gad! She carries it off as if she had been born to masquerade!" Kenilworth exclaimed. It was not Roddy's habit to enthuse over a woman except in her presence. He considered it a spendthrift waste of energy. Brandon shot a sharp glance at him. He noted that Roddy was rigid, his lips slightly parted, and that he breathed heavily. Joanna moved down the stairs slowly, a softly graceful figure that was taunting in its suppleness and the fragrance of its challenge to women in that room who would have yielded much of whatever was precious to them to have caught from her the least of her fascinations—the least of the beauties, her confident arrogance emphasized.

Someone, a man, clapped his hands. Immediately another leaped toward the steps. Teddy Dorminster broke away from Brandon and Kenilworth, and John, and swept past Yvonne, beating his rival to the girl's side. Before she knew his purpose Teddy had caught her up in his arms. For an instant her eyes flashed and she gave signs of scrambling to her feet, but she smothered the impulse. Teddy held her gracefully, easily, as if he were not unused to such performance. She settled in his arms and steadied her body by throwing a hand around his shoulder. Her golden slippers feet and silken expanse above them hung lax. When she looked into Teddy's face it was with only mock reproach.

A woman, her voice already shrill from champagne, cried, "Bravo!" Another echoed the cry, and then a babble of voices called out to Teddy and to the girl. Men crowded to the stairs, each eager to perform some share of the task of helping Joanna out of Teddy's arms onto the floor. A woman who stood behind John and Brandon said to her companion loud enough to be overheard:

"One of Teddy's best points is that he can force a woman as he has carried that one without mussing her." John's face grew a little whiter, and his fingers twitched nervously. He saw that when Teddy had put her down his arm lingered for a moment around the girl; that he held her close to him while he whispered and that Joanna brushed his cheek with the back of her hand playfully. The woman whom John had overheard spoke again: "Teddy is beginning a campaign. He always does it with a whisper. Whoever this girl is, and whatever she is, there are some people here tonight who will hate her—Teddy shows signs of following up that little tableau!"

"But John," she said, "I love you. I have always loved you."

John turned to look at the speaker. She returned his glance and started at what she saw in his face. Then she was amused. She said something to her companion, a man who quite evidently would not be her husband. He surveyed John curiously. He spoke to his companion in a low tone. "Yes, John probably is right. He's in love with the girl. Odd looking chap, but one who would make trouble if he felt like it."

Both Brandon and John sought to make their way to where Joanna stood, the center of a throng of men and women, some fascinated, as was Teddy Dorminster by her amazing beauty and freshness, and others paying their sycophantic dues to Yvonne by fawning upon her protegee. But neither reached her side before she was whisked into a doorway by Lord Teddy. He surrendered her after a few turns, to others who pressed forward for the privilege.

Men were fulsome in their compliments. The mystery of her was the intriguing subject to which everyone led along the route of intimate, personal things, things the men murmured softly while she swayed close with them to the music, or whispered so that her ears alone caught them. It had been decided by Yvonne that the history of her sudden shower of gold from an unknown benefactor should not be told. Kenilworth and Brandon, and the few others of Yvonne's intimates who knew, agreed to keep the secret. Dorminster had not been taken into Yvonne's confidence as to Joanna's wealth. The men who made their devotions to her, and the women who were curiously pleasant, soon gave up their efforts to fathom her after falling in such hints as: "Have you known Yvonne Coutant a very long time? Do you belong in New York, or are you from elsewhere?" The men returned gleefully to their sentimental venturings.

When a score of toasts in punch had been drunk to her, and she had flitted from one pair of arms to another in the dancing, Joanna became conscious of an unfamiliar quality in the murmured admiration heaped upon her. She had been accustomed to the tentative probing, of the boys in her old crowd, and their frankly said and usually sincerely meant flatteries. "You're a swell girl!" was what she had learned to expect. Her acknowledgment customarily was prompt and was perhaps: "Is that the best line you've got?" She knew the danger of the threat, or the safety, in every compliment, as her dancing boys paid them, and usually she guided them well away from the edge. But now she felt that her wits must grapple for new understandings. The men who captured her for a few fleeting moments sung their adorations in a more elusive melody. The words of their praises seemed harmless; but she sensed new meanings. Roddy Kenilworth took both of her hands and held her a little way from him and looked at her. All that he said was:

"You are very pretty tonight. That dress you are wearing must have been created just for you by a really great artist."

Nothing more. Yet Joanna was conscious that she trembled, and conscious, too, that she had been faithful to the present day mode which required that underneath that dress she wear but a single garment, so delicate and sheer that it almost blended into her skin. Roddy said only that she was pretty and her dress becoming. Yet she understood that the man who was speaking, and who had bantered her but a few nights before with the threat of his pursuit of her, already wanted to take her slim body into his arms, and crush it. She decided she would have to strengthen her battlements. She had learned to make her lips provocative, and use her knowledge boldly and saucily. She had the sense that in this order of life, so different from the domain of the silk counter and its flirtations, it was much more dangerous to be provoking.

The majority of the men were, of course, only silly. Especially those who were obviously important men of affairs, and who amused Joanna with their common adoption of one phrase: "I wish my wife were like you, now!" Three in succession! One who confided to her that he was an attorney representing "some of our very large interests," another whose name was magic in a store that competed with the one she had left, even Pendleton, who had been both a diplomat and a statesman!

As he breathed his response to her buoyant and restless youth, Pendleton indicated to her a pretty woman who probably was forty but looked thirty, and who seemed, in some intangible way, to be not very happy. Joanna saw that her eyes always followed her husband. Joanna thought she would like Mrs. Pendleton. And she didn't like Pendleton. She gave him an unexpected acknowledgment of his "If my wife were like you, now, I'd know how really to enjoy being in love!"

"Haven't you ever talked that over with anyone? Just for example, Mrs. Marks?"

Offense colored in his face immediately. But the girl in front of him was laughing up at him so brightly that he was helpless.

"Because Doris happens occasionally to meet me for tea," he protested, "doesn't necessarily mean that we have confidences. Anyhow, can't we forget everyone else, for this minute you have given me?"

Joanna couldn't, she told him, and left him with a parting smile. A moment later she timidly touched Mrs. Pendleton on the arm. "You won't mind, will you," she asked Pendleton's wife, "if I say that I want to know you? You see," she lied, "I have met Mr. Pendleton, and he was good enough to think you might like me. I wish you would."

The older woman was plainly confused, but recovered instantly. She took one of the girl's hands between both her own. "Why, that is sweet of you, my dear!" she exclaimed warmly. She was openly delighted by the pretty enthusiasm of the young girl, whose was the night's most frivolous butterfly. She was afraid she would go down in the torrent that seethed about her—a torrent that glittered and swept up laughter, luxury and extravagance, and the stakes of many gambles in love. This fear suddenly distressed Mrs. Pendleton.

When Kenilworth found opportunity to claim her again he saw that the first exclamations of Joanna's triumph in her success among these friends of Yvonne's had subsided, and that she was troubled. She drew in her breath, she accused her, but almost immediately afterwards admitted it. She had missed John! Brandon had talked with her but a few moments, resigning her, gracefully, to others who, made insistent by their third and fourth drinks, demanded their dance or tilt of wits with her. He had not mentioned that John had come, and had watched her entrance down the stairs and hilarious reception. Neither had Kenilworth, and Yvonne seemed suddenly to have disappeared from among her guests. Joanna began to want to go up to her boudoir and confront the pain of her disappointment. She could not restrain a little cry when Roddy told her:

"But where is he?" she exclaimed. "Please, won't you keep people away from me, while we find him? He couldn't have gone." They looked in the dim lit winter garden, people with couples who were for faint lights, and in the other rooms which had been thrown open. Brandon, too, had missed him, and so had Dorminster. Roddy, failing to glimpse Yvonne in any of the rooms, decided to seek her out in the morning room, off the reception hall, the little retreat of which few of her guests knew and to which none had admission but Kenilworth and Brandon. Roddy was convinced John would not have gone even if he had. Without a word he avoided Joanna, and when she saw him standing in the center of the room, she was suddenly angry, despite her eagerness. She would not forgive him, readily, she decided, for ignoring her. Then she realized that she could do nothing but forgive. Yvonne, who had sat directly in front of him, curled in her great soft chair, rose when she and Roddy entered.

Hunters in Alabama Are Pleased In Announcement Of Game Increases

(Associated Press)
MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 3.

Coming as good news to the hunters of the state, announcement has been made by I. T. Quinn, game and fish commissioner, that a substantial increase in the amount of game in Alabama has been noted in comparison with conditions last year. A survey conducted by the state department of game and fisheries has revealed that quail are most plentiful than they were at the opening of hunting season last year, Mr. Quinn announced. He said that in parts of the state deer have become so numerous that complaints have been received reporting that field crops have been damaged by the animals.

"This is the first time in something like 25 years that deer have become so numerous to merit complaint," said Commissioner Quinn. "In Washington and neighboring counties the animals are so numerous that they are taking a heavy toll of crops. In addition, they are appearing in sections of the state where it was thought deer were extinct for several years."

"Wild turkey are now to be found in practically every county of the state and squirrels are more abundant than they have been for years. A decided increase in fur-bearing animals has been noted, and trapping is becoming more profitable."

The first fish hatchery is expected to add to the fish supply within a short time, Mr. Quinn said and the outlook for this sport is particularly bright in that angling this year is better than it has been for some time. Mr. Quinn also stated that it was expected that the first stock from the fish hatchery will be put into waters of the state during this year. To swell the increase in game within the state, the department is seeking the co-operation of sportsmen and organizations in vermin control.

Mr. Quinn said and reported that increased numbers of vermin are being destroyed monthly.

Mr. Quinn believes that conservation is working over time in Alabama and he attributes much of the satisfactory condition to the efforts made along these lines.

"There is more real co-operation among sportsmen this year than ever before," he said. "This is attested in some degree by the large numbers of hunter's licenses taken out. More licenses have been issued this year than in any year in the history of the department."

12 Years Ago From the Daily of TODAY

Tax Collector Robinson has made a report of polls paid for this year amounting to 2,050 straight taxes.

Mrs. George Hartung has been slightly ill.

Miss Bertha Ratliffe of Center Grove, is the guest of Miss Martha Weaver.

Floyd Dillehay returned from Hot Springs Sunday practically a new man in health.

Mrs. Thomas Pettet is convalescent after an attack of grippe.

Masters Homer and Thomas Redding are slightly ill.

It is too late now to be sorry that you didn't pay your poll tax.

The Daily will join the chorus of those who hope the groundhog knows what he is talking about.

Well, the groundhog is for us anyway. Six weeks of pretty weather will start Morgan farmers dreaming of great harvests, merchants preparing for the finest spring trade in years.

The Muscle Shoals question proves its own gigantic proportions, Coolidge has consented to talk it over and there are so few things he talks about.

Some editorial writer has raised the question of what a dead man thinks about five minutes before the trap is sprung. Much more interesting is what he thinks about five minutes after it is sprung.

Fellow down at Dothan declares whiskey is to blame for his shooting his wife. Nowadays we didn't know it was necessary to blame it on booze, just get out with a gun and start shooting, then plead insanity.

Erskine Ramsey and Pooley Hubert, distinguished Alabamians, have done much for this state and the Twin Cities will cordially welcome them upon the occasion of their visit here Thursday evening.

Birmingham announces another new hotel. This extraordinary building record in Birmingham, follows the expenditure of many millions of dollars for new industries there, therefore the expansion of hotel and living facilities in Birmingham is on a substantial foundation. Another trio of "rahs" for Alabama.

Everybody says not guilty to the charge that some local interference is causing all the radio disturbance and we will agree that efforts have been made to remove the difficulties. Looks as if a few more years will be needed to perfect the machine before radioing can be done in comfort.

A negro woman fell dead in a Hartselle church as she finished asking for service to the Lord. Occurrences are often beyond our understanding, particularly under such circumstances, but it is not for us to question. We are here as mortals and we are to remain mortal.

The latest Birmingham case of an alleged speeder who broke through a funeral procession and caused two more deaths in his effort to avoid capture by officers is undoubtedly the wildest heard for some months. If the case stands as it is at present, ropes and electric chairs should be in demand. A man who has no more regard for respect to be shown the dead than is said to be true of this driver, should certainly not take much time in courts.

SHIEKS WILL BE REGULATED IN THEIR FAVORITE ART.

Movie shieks may kiss as long and as ardently as movie kisses, so long as they are not in San Francisco. Movie kisses in that city are to be limited to five seconds, tending to cramp the style of the movie shieks who are paid big money to bring their art before the eyes of a thirsting public. There is little doubt but that the shieks of the movie screen have caused the love lorn to have many a conscientious sigh, but unless the length of time the clinch is recorded is a trick of the camera we cannot see how they can endure for so long a time. Possibly the big shieks hold records for underwater swimming, that would tend to explain the ability at holding their breath.

BAPTIST PEOPLE CONGRATULATED BECAUSE OF THEIR PROGRESSIVENESS

The Daily, on behalf of the community, congratulates the members of the Central Baptist congregation for their enthusiastic decision Sunday to expand their work by erecting, on their present attractive site on Fourth avenue and Grant street, a modern new church building.

Not only was the decision of the Baptist people significant, but the manner in which it was reached was more significant. Officials declare that never has the congregation enjoyed more enthusiasm over a single expansion project.

It is a healthy sign, indeed, when the churches of a community find it easy to go forward. The Twin Cities, for many years have been proud of their churches, and have had much reason to be so. Now, with one new church just recently completed, and several others in the early formative stages Albany and Decatur will have further reason to take their place near the head of the list of church communities.

AGAINST THE LAW OF AVERAGE TO DIVIDE THE EARNINGS.

Thinking of the upper strata of life, that is the folks who enjoy a finer setting in life mainly through their earning powers, it is seen that it is against all laws of average for my man to divide his earnings, his profits with his fellowman, no matter how earnestly that fellow worker may be striving to maintain a little home, lead an upright life and follow in the existence of the everyday man, the middle man who works from the time he is able to walk until his hands are forced to drop the torch.

One man makes several millions of dollars, another with the same opportunities works twice as hard and yet is able only to make his existence. The more fortunate of the two divides the cake with his fellow worker, placing him in position to fulfill his ideals, for after all money helps to take us away from misery. The man who has known nothing but work all his life is made happy, the donor is happier for having made someone else happy. Yet, it doesn't happen. The man who is making the money continues to make money and the poorer of the two continues to work, just as hard and as earnestly.

It is probably that the Master has not meant for man to receive money easily, yet there are many who inherit vast fortunes and never know throughout the days of their life what it means to do an honest day of toil. It is another distinction of which the human being knows little and one which it does little good to question. We only know that we are placed in our individual walks of life and that it is up to us to make the best of what we have. Happiness can be found in other than money, happiness can be found in achievement and doing for others, planning and building, fighting the ups and downs of life protecting others. Happiness cannot be bought by a long shot and after all might make some very useless people out of otherwise efficient citizens if it happened to come too readily.

LAW AND ORDER GOES TO THE EXTREME IN ENFORCEMENT

You know sometimes when we sit down with the evening paper and read of riot calls and mob rule in various sections of the nation, turn and cut off the radio and indulge in a bit of thought, we often wonder what justification there is in breaking mob violence when it means the taking of additional lives. We read of guards being placed about prisons to prevent mobs from taking criminals out of the hands of the law. We glance over column after column and find an item in a distant city, "officers slew two in breaking riot," and its sorter hard to figure out. What is the use of killing two to save one. What's the use of stopping a riot if you are endangering lives of many people, though they are members of the riot? That is a question that often puzzles and brings down numerous maledictions upon the heads of officers of the law. Officers of the law are vested with authority, they are not students of human nature, so then their ability at guarding criminals or breaking riots can be attributed to a sense of duty. Yet the cause of the riot is found to be in human nature. Human beings rise at times to the point of killing, the vast majority are able to withstand such desire. Once in a while some hot headed fanatic takes matters into his own hands and incites others, weaker beings, intellectually, to follow. If the officer of the law did not stop such acts, it might be that such occurrences would become common. One man might bear malice toward another, incite a few of his fellow townsmen and go down the road to get him and possibly string him up. Human nature is vengeful, quick to resent and just as quick to forgive in most cases. It is the vengeful side of nature that must be curbed, that is the reason officers are justified before the courts for carrying out their duty. Law enforcement is a hard taskmaster and yet is the one regulation that will keep some humans mindful of consideration due to others.

THE PART YOU PLAY WILL BE COUNTED AT THE CLOSE

Within a short space of time the campaign for the Benevolent Hospital expansion program will be opened. In reality the drive has already opened, it has been open for years, yet citizens of these cities, this county and neighboring counties have failed to grasp the opportunity thus far for offering greater relief for suffering humanity. This time, we feel, there will be no failure, or any lack of response on the part of the citizenship in four counties which the hospital serves, the drive will go over with a rush, provided each individual plays the part cut out for him in the drive.

Every individual has a part to play, every citizen of the section is vitally interested, directly concerned whether he or she has been enlisted under team colors yet or not, it is a matter for the whole people to decide and the decision must be given this time. We are going to continue to have a small facility for taking care of a great many human ills, or we are going to have an adequate facility for taking care of those same ills.

At what time are you going to be listed among the long role of unfortunates? The human body is a frail substance, there is no man, woman, or child who does not suffer from some malady. The condition of the disease at this time may not warrant treatment at a hospital, at some time later things may be changed.

Today, tomorrow, or the next day, as you go about the daily pathways of life, the paths you have followed all your days, you may be struck down. There may appear to be very little reason for your being stricken, but it is not for man to decide, the question paramount in such a case is what facility is there at hand to take care of an emergency case? What would you do at such a trying period? You are no longer robust and healthy, able to take care of yourself, confident in your own strength. You have then become a member of that great number of people who need medical aid and need it quickly. Efficient methods must be at hand else you may be taken at a time when you feel you are needed with your family and your friends. Improvement of hospital facilities cannot insure you against death, but facilities in a great many cases do save life. Hospitals cannot thwart the will of God, yet in many cases they aid the will of the Master. Whether you are going to have the chance for life may rest upon the facility that is to be found at the hospital. If you are here in Albany-Decatur and a train ride means life or death then a hospital in a distant city is not going to aid you. It may be the finest in the world, famed for saving lives but it will not be available to you. If you will not think of the lives of your friends then consider your own life. Prepare to play your part in the hospital drive that is little more than a week off now, join the growing list of workers, make your own contribution no matter how small, play your part in a worthy work.

HEREAFTER pitchers may smear resin, pronounced by fans "rosin" on their hands and thus increase "control." They must not smear the resin on the ball.

That's bad news for Babe Ruth and the other batters.

AS hitherto predicted, mine owners will probably win the coal strike although the victory may be camouflaged as a "compromise."

The workers made a mistake in their original absolute rejection of arbitration.

PUBLIC opinion would condemn the mine owners if they flatly refused arbitration in a matter of starvation for workmen's families. Public opinion condemns when they effect arbitration in a matter that involves freezing of the public.

When this period of ultra-conservatism passes America will discover, as England has done, that if workers and owners cannot agree in matters involving a public necessity, the people will have to take the decision away from them and settle it for themselves.

YOU realize how conservative this nation has become when you hear that Judge Wallace McCamant, nominated by President Coolidge for the Ninth Judicial Circuit declared that Theodore Roosevelt cannot be considered a "good American" because he advocated the recall of judicial decisions.

ANY man, judge or jailer, who believes that the people of the United States have not the right to do whatever they choose to do, legally, through the ballot box, or constitutional amendment, has traveled a long way from 1776.

Hiram Johnson opposes Judge McCamant's confirmation because of the Judge's opinion of Theodore Roosevelt. Roosevelt is dead, and what one man thinks of another isn't very important. But the opinion is enlightening.

SOLOMON LEVITAN, able financier, and State Treasurer of Wisconsin, broadcasts the information that the farmers of his state 'prefer help to advice.' If all the advice they got had a cash value, the farmers' income tax would pay the national debt says Mr. Levitan.

Every farmer gets ninety kinds of advice to 'stand on his own feet like an independent American,' from some of our distinguished financiers.

What he would like to get from the government is a little of the co-operation that goes, for instance to the railroads.

AN aged Serbian nobleman, Ambassador to London, marries a second time at the age of 83. He says: "I have lived long because I married very young a good woman who took great care of me."

It would be a good thing for "good women" if it didn't take so many men 83 years to realize what they owe their wives. Most husbands die without ever realizing it.

A POST OFFICE airplane left Chicago on Friday night, delivered the mail in New York seven hours later, average speed of 134 miles an hour for the 726 miles as the crow flies. That seems fast now. In a few years it will seem a snail's pace.

The other day a party of men, including a busy broker and one real estate, left Florida in the morning, dined in New York in the evening.

Lowden Forsakes Vice President's Job To Help Farmer Remove Surplus

(Associated Press)
CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, the man who overturned precedent by declining the vice presidential nomination after he had been formally chosen by his party and who is leading a movement for an export corporation for disposal of crop surpluses, actually is a dirt farmer.

Sinissippi Farm, which spreads its broad expanse of 4,500 acres along the Rock River near Oregon, Ill., 99 miles northwest of Chicago, is his only home and has been for a quarter of a century. The farm is divided into eleven units, ten of them tilled by share croppers, or, as the former governor terms them, partners. The eleven unit, a full section of 640 acres, is the "home place" and it is there that Mr. Lowden actually puts into practice his theories of practical farming, while, at the same time, acting as general overseer of the other ten units.

There is a four-room office building with two clerks on the "home place" but management of the property finds the former governor most every day in the open, usually astride a rather spirited horse as he directs the harvesting, planting, feeding and milking.

One-third the acreage is under cultivation, a second 1,500 acres is devoted to pastures and the remainder is in wooded upland.

Corn, oats, barley, rye and alfalfa make up the Sinissippi crops, but because of development of the farm's dairy herds little is left for marketing.

Distributed among the eleven farm units are 350 Holstein-Friesian milk cows. Six of the units are stocked with full blooded, registered cows, while the other five units operate with "grade" cattle, cross-breeds, although the percentage of pure blood is high. On the "home place," Mr. Lowden has nearly fifty pure-bred Holstein-Friesians, and space is being provided for additions.

Much of the land had been tilled until virtually lifeless when it came into possession of the former governor, and he delights to tell of producing one hundred bushels of corn to an acre, where previously not more than twenty to thirty had been produced. The entire farm can not boast of that record production, but several acres were pointed out as having done so.

For several years he planted 50,000 seedling pines annually on the bare spots and it is with more pleasure that he points to trees he placed twenty years ago. Tree diseases have appeared in sections from which he formerly obtained his seedling pines, and next spring he will establish his own nursery.

"All of Illinois does not produce enough seedling pines to supply me," he said.

Tractors and horses both are used on the farm. There is some work in which each excels, although Mr. Lowden hinted that his personal preference ran towards horses. The farm horses are all sizeable animals, Percherons, Belgians and Clydes, in the majority.

All ten of Mr. Lowden's partners are practical farmers, some college-bred and some sons of the soil. All of them are American-born.

LEARN HOW TO LIVE FOR USEFUL AGE

Inquire Into the Cause of Any Chronic Disability and Then Apply the Available Medical Knowledge to Restore Health.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

SOMEONE has said, "An inquiring mind is a safer mind to follow than a mind that accepts everything, with a gulp and a smile."

I believe this is true in health matters. It is a great mistake to accept ill health "with a gulp and a smile." It is possible often, by inquiring into the causes of chronic disability, to discover the reasons for it and then by the application of appropriate measures to overcome it. Proper application of available health knowledge will permit many people to live to be a hundred years old.

That is why an "inquiring mind" in health matters is usually a safe mind to follow. Such a mind will not rest until it finds out all the facts and then it is safe to assume, the proper course to take will be discovered.

One of the favorable signs of the times is the availability of health information. No longer are these secrets locked up in the brains of physicians and denied to the layman. More and more the medical profession is advising that the public be taught how to live so that disease will be avoided.

Sam J. Q.—What causes one to feel heavy, and belch gas for about two hours after eating?

A.—This condition is probably due to hyperacidity. Send self addressed stamped envelope for full particulars and repeat your question.

L. M. R. Q.—What causes my four-year-old "j" to awaken every night and cry and scream? Her eyes get big and she screams for half an hour?

A.—It would be advisable to consult a physician for an examination and determine the source of the trouble.

J. J. M. Q.—Is mineral oil a good laxative?

A.—Yes, it is.

It is in your power to add years to your life and to add useful years. Do not hesitate on the theory that you don't want to sit in a chair and knit for a few extra years. That is not what I propose. That is worth while, isn't it?

Dividends Regularly for 40 Years

Constant war on waste
Products of first quality
Uninterrupted dividends
Stability of earnings
Small profits per pound on large volume

The life history of Swift & Company's operations is thus briefly summarized.

The chemical laboratory and the constant search for improved methods have reduced waste to a minimum. They have also enabled us to improve greatly the quality of your meat.

Thrift and conservative policies have made it possible to pay dividends without interruption for 40 years, although our profits have averaged only a fraction of a cent per pound of product.

Swift & Company thrift has benefited others beside Swift shareholders. A portion of the gains resulting from thrift is passed along to the producers of live stock and to the consumers of meat. Competition sees to that.

RUTHALIAN CLUB GUESTS OF MRS. PETTEY

Mrs. T. M. Pettey entertained the Ruthalian club on Tuesday afternoon at her home on Jackson street. Oratorio was the feature of the afternoon's program. Mrs. R. C. Perkins talked on "What Oratorio is" and she stressed the stupendous growth of Oratorio of Europe and America. Mrs. E. D. Whitman explained oratorio saying that it was a composite form of art drawing its style, ideals and methods of execution from both the opera and the church. "Opera can never enter into the life of the mass of art loving people as Oratorio does was the subject discussed by Mrs. S. E. Arvidson after which Mrs. George Jackson told of the unlimited opportunity for musical inventions. Following this "Handel's Oratorio; Israel in Egypt" was given in story form interspersed by the songs by the club members. Miss Elizabeth Wallace sang with feeling "Der Ges and Miriam" by Moliere accompanied by Mrs. W. E. Curry.

Proceeding the Bible lesson, a vocal solo "I Will Lift Mine Eyes Unto the Hills" by Mrs. Maury. Mrs. Parler gave the Bible lesson in a very interesting manner.

This program was so intensely interesting that it was decided that this club would make a study of it from year to year.

Huntsville Has Real "Wild Cat"

Calling a moonshine still a "wild cat" outfit is a misnomer, it seems for over in Huntsville a real "wild cat" has been discovered.

A cat in that city became rabid and after attacking a man, biting him severely, hopped on a dog and chewed the canine to pieces. The head, examined at the Tennessee Valley laboratory here, showed positive in an examination for rabies.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl of nineteen years and have been corresponding with a young man for more than a year. He says he loves me and has written quite steadily. Recently some mutual friends returned to his home town. Since then he has not written. I value his friendship very much. Do you think it proper for me to write again for an explanation, at least? BILLIE.

BILLIE: Possibly your friend has not received your letter to him. Billie, and is waiting for a reply. Why not write him once more, asking him if he received your last letter? Then, if he cares to continue the correspondence, he will answer you. So often friendships are broken because of letters going astray.

Birmingham To Increase Facilities For Taking Care Of Fires In City

(Associated Press)
BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 3.—Plans for five new fire stations are being drawn here, and city officials believe that they will be ready within a short time. A program involving an expenditure of approximately $200,000 is being advocated by commissioner John H. Taylor, who is in favor of a bond issue to provide necessary funds. If this program, two new stations will be added to those already in use and three old stations will be rebuilt.

If the proposed program is adopted new stations will be constructed in the Lakeview section of the south Highland district and in the Cotton avenue section of West End. New buildings will replace those now in use in the Five Points district of South Highlands and in Avondale.

The addition of these new stations is held to be necessary in view of a warning by the Southeastern Underwriters association that insurance rates in the affected districts would be raised unless more adequate fire protection is provided.

In addition to the construction of new stations, the purchase of approximately $100,000 worth of fire equipment is being considered. This equipment would include six new motor pumps, five of 750 gallon capacity and one of 1,000 gallon capacity. A system of incinerators for the city is also being planned at an estimated cost of $400,000 and is expected that the costs of both projects will be placed before the people in a bond issue of $250,000 or $700,000. Commissioner W. L. Dickson is at work on the incinerator project and is expected to announce definite plans within a short time.

Prince Carol Is Not Playing A New Role In Renunciation Of A Throne

(Associated Press)

BUDAPEST, Feb. 3.—Prince Carol's row with Queen Marie and renunciation of the succession to the Rumanian throne is no novelty in European royal families; most of whom Carol is related either by blood or marriage.

The king business has palled on a good many heirs to important European thrones. Even Frederick the Great made an effort to his youth to escape from Prussia and the harsh treatment of his father, King Frederick William I. His effort to get away to England was frustrated by his father who had two of his sons accomplices executed.

But Frederick the Great's affair with Barberina the Italian dancer, after he had ascended the throne of Prussia was kept under far better control than the love affairs of Prince Carol. When Frederick suspected the dancer was mixing in politics he dismissed her from the court.

Ludwig I. of Bavaria told of his cabinet he would rather give up his throne than break of his relations with Lola Montez, the dancer. One of Ludwig's ministries was called the "Lolaministerium," because Lola Montez had named it and directed affairs of state at will. She finally lost her political hold and had to flee. A little later, Ludwig had to surrender his throne to his son because of the scandal.

Lola Montez became a wanderer, appearing on the stage in most world capitals. Her notoriety, however, soon lost drawing power and she died in obscurity and was buried in Brooklyn.

Princess Louise of Saxony, tired of life at the Dresden court, eloped with the French tutor of her sons, M. Giron, in December, 1902. Two years later, her husband succeeded to the throne of Saxony as King Frederick Augustus III. Like Prince Carol of Rumania she apparently was not constant in her love. She divorced the Frenchman and married an Italian musician whom she also divorced. She now is living in straightened circumstances in Belgium.

Princess Louise of Belgium who died at Wiesbaden in 1924, married Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha but deserted him in favor of an Austrian cavalry officer. This apparently was a true love affair, as Princess Louise endured poverty with Captain Mattiasch and nursed him during his final illness in Paris, a short time before her own death. She tried without success to break the will of her father, Leopold II, who left much of his property to his mistress, the Baroness Vaughn.

Grand Duke Cyril, the Roumanoff who holds court at Coburg and has solemnly been proclaimed Czar of all the Russias by his faithful White Russian followers, figured in a divorce case which has opponents insist would disqualify him for the Russian throne should the Soviet government be replaced by a monarch. The Grand Duchess Cyril, born a princess of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, was first married to the Grand Duke of Hesse, whom she divorced to marry the Russian nobleman.

The Austrian archduke, John Nepomuck Salvador, renounced all his titles and took command of a sailing ship. He is supposed to have been drowned off the coast of South America in 1891 but there have been numerous rumors that he is still alive. At one time he was reported to have been seen in Denver.

Correct weight can be yours

SSS

"I DO NOT want to be thin! I just want to be my right weight! I want these hollows filled out. I just want enough firm, plump flesh on my bones to fill out my figure."

Of course you do. You want a figure that you can drape your clothes on—not just hang them on! What's the use of having pretty clothes, if they just hang on you?

And what would you say if you were told you could have the figure you want? A graceful, well rounded body—firm, solid flesh—just enough—just your right weight? You'd be mighty happy, wouldn't you?

Well, then, be happy—because you can have it! Put plenty of red cells in your blood and watch your weight go up to where you want it! That's what's the matter with you! Your blood is impoverished. You need more rich, red blood. S. S. S. is the thing to put red blood in your system. S. S. S. helps Nature build red blood cells by the millions.

You just try S. S. S. and watch how quickly you begin to fill out your clothes. Notice your skin clear of unsightly blemishes—your appetite increase—strength come to flabby muscles—and vim and vigor fill your whole system. It's red blood that does it. And S. S. Hartselle News

Saturday a large number of people were in from the country, merchants reporting the best trade day since the Christmas holidays. Many were buying their seed oats and onion sets, and with pretty weather prevailing this week, out sowing will commence, and early gardening will be done.

The few pretty days last week worked fine on the country roads, helping to dry up the mud, and the large amount of cross ties and other timber brought to town the last two days of the week was evidence that conditions are getting better off the pike.

Rosetime, a play will be given at the public school auditorium this week by M. C. H. S. pupils.

Work is resumed by C. E. Malone on the highways he having fired up his machinery Friday, preparatory to beginning after several weeks of shut down on account of the weather conditions. Mr. Malone has the contract of resurfacing the highways and applying asphalt.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Draper of Albany were here Thursday in attendance at the funeral of Mrs. Draper's brother Mr. C. P. Hill.

Messrs Eric Howell, Ernest Weiman and Luther Fuller left Sunday afternoon for Columbia, Tenn., to be present at the regular first of each month stock sale day. These gentlemen deal quite extensively in male stock and recently returned with some of the Tennessee thoroughbreds.

The great need for water works was again emphasized for Hartselle last Friday, when the T. E. Crittendon home went down in ashes. When the alarm was given, had plenty of water been at the command of the present, the fire could have been stopped before it got so bad.

The council will meet in session Friday evening and at that time, it is indicated, the question of paving Second avenue again will be brought up for discussion. There is considerable sentiment in the council, it is said, in favor of paving the thoroughfare this spring.

An effort is being made again to open up the street running south from the L. & N. depot across town branch and intersecting with streets near the ball park. Should this be done, it will add greatly to the appearance, and make a most convenient roadway for traffic to be loaded on cars.

It is understood that the railroad company will extend their cotton platform considerably southward, and be able to care for all the cotton that might be brought for loading.

The city authorities and the railroad officials have the matter up for final consideration.

Lots of cedar logs are now being hauled to the cedar mill of L. G. Guley located here, from different sections of the county. It was thought many years since that the cedar timber was fast disappearing. It seems that the quick growth takes care of that which is sold, and in a remarkably short time other trees have become large enough to market.

The death of C. P. Gill which occurred here last Monday, January 25, removed one of the most familiar faces in Hartselle. For many years Mr. Gill was a prescriptionist here, and later embarked in the drug business under the firm of Cox and Gill. After running a successful drug store for a number of years, the firm was dissolved and the stock sold. Since that time Mr. Gill has been in poor health. He had many friends here, and was a welcome visitor and an entertaining character. He lived alone in his own home, and since the death of his mother, has steadfastly refused to leave the old home. He was upright and honorable in every particular and will be greatly missed among his large circle of friends.

TWO DEATHS RESULT FROM A WILD DRIVE

Speeder Breaks Thru Funeral Line To Avoid Arrest

(Associated Press)
BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 2.—Mrs. T. E. Patterson of Omaha, Neb., victim of an automobile accident on Highland avenue last Wednesday died today at a local infirmary. She was injured when struck by a car driven by O. R. Johnson, 1613 Tuscaloosa avenue, West End, and pneumonia contracted since the accident caused her death.

Mrs. Patterson's death, superinduced by the accident, occurred a little more than 24 hours after the death of Louis Morris Bridges, negro, who also was injured by the speeding automobile.

Johnson, released from the city jail Friday night, on bond totalling $1,500, again was taken into custody following the death of Bridges Sunday night. According to authorities, he now is facing a charge of double murder.

Johnson has waived preliminary trial, but has requested a habeas corpus hearing. This is scheduled to be held next Monday.

Johnson was said by officers to have broken a funeral line and when chased by motorcycle police, speeded up and passed a standing street car at a speed of 60 miles an hour. A charge of driving while intoxicated also was lodged against him.

THEATRES

Mary Pickford, foremost screen aristocrat, in her new screen feature, "Little Annie Rooney," a United Artists Corporation release coming tomorrow at the Princess Theatre, has stepped out of the costume drama role and back into the regumuffin, hoydenish, comedy characterization that so endeared her to the public and won the title "The World's Sweetheart."

The scene of "Little Annie Rooney" for the most part are laid in the teeming tower East Side direct of New York City, and the famous old Brooklyn Bridge has an important role.

"Little Annie Rooney" is the twelve year old daughter of a New York policeman; leads a band of street urchins in fiercely contested, rough and tumble, biting and kicking, battle with rival gangs; and is secretly and madly in love with a strapping truck driver the pal of her big brother Tim Rooney.

Her garb consists of cheap calicoes, musty-looking, down-at-the-heels shoes, and, sometimes, a boy's cap.

Ten different nationalities and races are represented among the kid types in the two score or so youngsters figuring in the picture. There also are many animals, dogs and cats, a goat, a pig and a couple of horses.

Lower East Side New York streets and districts faithfully are reproduced in the picture. There are streets and alleyways littered with old tin cans and all sorts of rubbish.

Battering Bambino Is On Road To A New Record; Removes 36 Pounds of Fat

The first thing you know the Battering Babe will be posing for patent medicine advertisements telling how to get thin in ten days. The Babe has removed about 36 pounds of extra weight in his pre-season training schedule, a schedule adopted all by his lonesome and with no suggestions from the outside. The Babe is looking forward to a great year and with his determination to play the game for all it is worth, be a nice little boy and do what his managers tell him, it begins to look as if his early season "dope" will not all be applesauce.

Babe leads the Yankee train to Florida, beats the other lads there by about three weeks getting himself into shape to measure up to what the managers and public expect. The Babe declares he may not set a new record, but he likewise predicts that he will beat his record of last year.

Here's the way to build a championship team. Take a tip from the North Carolina coach, H. F. Sanburn. He started with his boys when they were in prep school and now he has come on up to North Carolina with the same outlay of talent and that talent has copped the Southern Basketball championship ever since we can remember. Last year Tulane went to the top with a rush only to be stemmed by the Carolinians. Carolina has lost two Carmichaels who were mainstays, but that apparently has caused little grief for the Tarheels, Cobb Vanstory and Dodderer have been playing under Tarheel colors for some years, lead by the wise mind of Sanford and it is likely that Carolina will repeat again this year. Colleges over the nation have attempted to build up such a system for some years placing their stars in prep school coaching positions where the boys are taught the fundamentals of play. When they arrive in the college camps they are already prepared to give battle in the same style, not being forced to reconstruct their thinking caps in the emergency.

Joe Stecher seems to have the clearest title to the wrestling championship of the world. He has succeeded in applying his body scissors about the stomach of Ivan Poddubny, "The Invincible Dud" and thereby established a claim superior to that of Strangler Lewis and Wayne Munn. Stecher has been in the game a long while and has won and lost many fights, yet dispatches claim that his victory over the Russian was his most spectacular. Stecher was outweighed several pounds, was against a stronger opponent and yet his speed and ability carried him to the heights yet unattained by any man for a number of years. Joe Stecher is recognized as one of the cleanest fighters in the mat game and his victory is regarded as a tribute to his worth.

Air Mail Service Is On Eve Of An Expansion; To Benefit The Country

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The air mail service, pioneer in commercial aviation in the United States and world trail blazer in the art of night flying is on the eve of an expansion which will benefit a large portion of the country.

Within the next few months, air mail service will be provided for two score more cities with indirect benefit to other places in a wide expanse of territory. This progressive step has been taken under the law passed last year permitting the Postmaster General to contract with commercial aviation enterprise for the carrying of the mails through the air.

Contracts have been let or have been advertised for a dozen routes. The first to begin service will be the Chicago-Detroit and the Cleveland-Detroit routes on February 15, and by April a majority of these routes are expected to be in operation.

Postmaster General New and Second Assistant Postmaster General W. Irving Glover, who has direct supervision of the air mail service, are enthusiastic over the prospects of the new air mail routes.

The first air mail service was initiated in 1918 between New York and Washington. A through service between New York and San Francisco was begun July 1, 1924, and an overnight service between New York and Chicago has been in operation since July 1, 1925.

Air mail pilots have flown more than 10,000,000 miles since establishment of the service. During last year 2,501,555 miles were flown. With the new air mail contract routes now proposed, mail pilots, it is estimated will fly a total of 4,015,304 miles yearly.

The new services, with the yearly mileage include contract routes between:

Boston and New York via Hartford 117,504 miles. Chicago and St. Paul-Minneapolis via Milwaukee and La Crosse, 230,724 miles. Chicago and Dallas-Fort Worth via Moline, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Wichita and Oklahoma City 604,044 miles. Chicago and St. Louis via Peoria and Springfield, Ill. 170,136 miles. Elko, Nev., and Pasco, Wash. via Boise, Ida., 286,220 miles. Salt Lake City and Los Angeles via Las Vegas, Nev. 367,200 miles. Seattle and Los Angeles via Portland, Medford, Sacramento, San Francisco, Fresno and Bakersfield, 686,052 miles. Detroit and Chicago, 145,044 miles. Detroit and Cleveland, 55,692 miles. Chicago and Birmingham, Ala., via Indianapolis, Louisville and Nashville, 378,828 miles. Chicago and New Orleans, via St. Louis, Memphis and Jackson, Miss. 532,440 miles. Atlanta and Miami, via Jacksonville and Tampa, 406,368 miles. Seattle and Victoria, B. C., 20,832 miles. New Orleans and Pilotown, La., 14,720 miles.

Other services of the air mail, under operation by the government, are between:

New York and San Francisco via Bellefonte, Cleveland, Bryan, Chicago Iowa City, Des Moines Omaha, North Platte, Cheyenne, Rawlins, Rock Springs, Salt Lake City, Elko, Reno and Sacramento; transcontinental service, 1,945,450 miles yearly.

New York and Chicago, via Bellefonte, Cleveland and Bryan over-night service, 358,644 miles yearly.

Owing to the different laws establishing the various air mail services there are several rates of postage. On the transcontinental route the rate of 8 cents an ounce for each of the three zones, the zones ending at Chicago and Cheyenne. On the over-night service between New York and Chicago the rate is 10 cents an ounce. On each contract route the rate is fixed at 10 cents an ounce for 1,000 miles or less; 15 cents for 1,000 to 1,500 miles and 20 cents for over 1,500 miles.

Air mail originating on contract routes and destined for points along the transcontinental route will be carried over the latter route at 5 cents an ounce for each zone in addition to the contract air mail postage.
